Another rare prize placed on exhibition was a group of seven colossal statues of the lioness headed Egyptian goddess Sekhmer, in dforite, or "black granite." The goddesses were purchased in 1914 by Henry Walters, second vice-president of the museum, as a gift to the institution, but as Admiral von Tirelle here were presented of display, they pits was no respecter of divinity they got no nearer this country than the Liv-erpool docks and there for upward of four years their feline grins were wasted four years their feline grins were wasted upon unappreciative workmen.

To-day the goddesses are seated in the twelfth Egyptian room in surroundings befitting their greatness. They are believed to be from the collection which Amenhotep III. caused to be set up during his reign in the XVIII. Dynasty in the Temple of Mut at Karnak. Each is seated upon a throne of low rolling back, and several still wear upon their heads the solar disk and uraeus.

The suit of armor is believed to have been worn by Sleur Jacques Gourdom de Genouilhae, a distinguished warrior and courtier of the time of Louis XII, and Francis I. It bears the date 1527, and was acquired for the museum by Will-

FAY BAINTER TO BE BRIDE OF NAVY MAN

Engagement to Lieut.-Com-mander Venable Announced.

Announcement was made yesterday of the engagement of Fay Bainter, star of "East is West," to Lieut.-Commander Reginald Venable. News of the engagement came as a surprise to the actress's friends, as it has been a very closely guarded secret.

It was reported at first along Broad way that the couple had been married three weeks ago, the ceremony taking place in the officers' quarters of a submarine chaser at Stamford, Conn. which thus became a "love boat" like that in the play at the Astor Theatre. Lieut.-Commander Venable, however, denied the marriage had taken place, but admitted smilingly that he expected it would in the future, though how soon e wasn't prepared to say.

Miss Bainter and the naval officer have been engaged a year. They met a little more than a year ago, be-ing introduced by mutual friends. Commander Venable returned to this country at the beginning of this year and was promoted to his present rank for his overseas work. Since then he has been a frequent visitor at Miss Bain-ter's summer cottage at Sound Beach
